To Whom It May Concern,

In more than 20 years of designing interiors for a vast range of projects, clients and management structures internationally, we've found that superior project management is all the more valuable because of its rarity.

Paul Cenzoprano is a rare manager, indeed.

As designers of the interiors for some 37,000 square feet of restaurant, bar and lounge amenities provided for top level season ticket holders at the new Yankee Stadium, our work was facilitated by Paul's knowledge, talent, patience, persistence, and flexibility.

Paul manages to balance a genuine respect for the design process and utmost dedication to meeting the owners' needs. His ability to bring the premium space, food service and retail in on time and under budget is proof that balance works.

His approach was systematic, thorough, organized and methodical. At the same time, he dealt with project issues, changes and questions openly, swiftly and efficiently.

We found him to be a great team builder and leader who kept his cool and maintained exceptional project harmony throughout this complex project, which had many passionate and often challenging stakeholders.

We'd work with Paul again in a New York minute!
